Inpatient Charge Slip

Inpatient Charge Slip

When you're in charge of someone else's healthcare needs, it's important to establish your company as a clean, trustworthy and professional business. A patient's well-being is not something anyone can afford to take a chance on. So, hospitals and medical practitioners go to great lengths to make sure that their patients will trust them. That's why the HIPAA compliance act was put in place ...

Every year, hospitals lose millions of dollars when items used in the course of a patient's care somehow slip through the system without ever being charged or reimbursed. At Yale-New Haven Hospital in Connecticut, a Six Sigma project team decided to look at the opportunities related to patient charge capture. The first thing the team realized was the importance of scoping this project to set realistic parameters.

A number of years ago, one of our very best clinical educators stopped signing resident inpatient notes and inpatient charges. The excuse was that there just wasn't enough time in the work day and it got in the way of bedside teaching. No note meant no bill for service. No bill meant no income. No income meant no job. Don't under bill. Most large academic medical practices do billing ...
