Institutional Selves Troubled Identities in a Postmodern World Edited by Jaber F. Gubrium and James A. Holstein. Institutional Selves highlights the process of self construction in a wide variety of institutional settings that contend with social and personal troubles. These organizations are virtually in the business of constructing the selves they need to do their work. From the victims and villains of television talk shows, to battered women in support groups, to the violent selves of ...

Institutional Selves - Paperback - Jaber F. Gubrium; James ...

Institutional Selves acknowledges the socially practical self we live by. It brings together nine distinctive chapters that collectively address the institutional construction of troubled identities. From the victims and villains of television talk shows, to battered women in support groups, to the violent selves of prison inmates, this book illustrates how selves are organizationally informed and structured in institutional practice. The institutional construction of selves is an ...
