In 'The Ark before Noah' Dr Finkel gives an enthralling and authoritative account of a 150 year old problem. His analysis is solidly based on his knowledge as an expert in cuneiform, and he successfully conveys his enthusiasm for the subject. Review: The Ark before Noah: Decoding the Story of the Flood by Irving Finkel The Flood story, absent Noah, is rather widespread in ancient civilizations. There are remnants of two versions of the Flood story in the book of Genesis. (I challenge readers to review the Flood accounts in Genesis and to write down a summary of what they read.) The Ark Tablet was written during the Old Babylonian period, broadly 1900-1700 BC. The document was not dated by the scribe, but from the shape and appearance of the tablet itself, the character and composition of the cuneiform signs and the grammatical forms and usages, we can be sure that this is the period in which it was written. It was composed in Semitic Babylonian, that is Akkadian, in a literary style. The hand is smallish and neat and that of a fully trained cuneiform scribe whose ...

The Ark in the Koran. Nuh's [Noah] lifeboat Ark had no special name, but is referred to as safina, the common word for boat, Sura 54:3 describing it as 'a thing of boards and nails'.
